

There are many reasons why education is important to me and should be important to everyone. Education is something everyone can relate to. Nobody likes to go back to school after summer, but we know we have to. We have teachers that we love and help us achieve new heights and teachers we don't like but know are pushing us to complete better work. We have classes that we don't really like but know in the end they are only helping to shape our character and our interests. We have had friends in classes and we have had enemies in classes, all however with the same goal, to learn. Through all these experiences, we will learn more about ourselves while also learning so that one day we may get a job and raise a family. It is extremely said to think that many people around the world do not have the chance to attend school on a daily basis. We sometimes complain about going to school, the teachers, the bullies that pick on us when in other countries someone is probably dying to be in our spot.

No matter how much I dislike school or how much it may sometimes get me down, I know that it will all benefit me in the future. I know that my parents have been through it in the past and I know I will experience it more in the future. Education is important to me because no matter how much I may dislike sitting in school with a teacher I don't care for, I know there is nothing more important to me for my future. I someday will want a house, a car, a family, and a job and the good and bad experiences through education will one day help me achieve all of these. Just like my mom and dad, they too may of thought that school was not fun and it would never benefit them. Now seeing my parents and their jobs, I know education is important to everyone. My dad has a good job and I know that only came because of his education. My mom also has a good job and her job is also from her education.

Education is important for all these reasons and so much more. We sometimes take advantage of our situation and education and forget why we are here. Everyone needs to stop and realize why we are in school and why it will benefit us now and even more in the future. No matter who you are or where you are education should be important to you. The classes we think don't matter know will in the future. Education now will shape our future.
